Burrowers-Bewarel

Gophers and prairie dogs are the bane of western farmers, while in the seast woodchucks are the type of bursewing animals that cause the tillers of the soil to forget some of the tillers of the soil to forget some of the tillers of the soil to forget some of the tillers of the soil to forget some of the tillers of the soil to forget some of the tillers the dominie tells them on Sundays.

Don Leonardo Rois, a California rancher, says "dynamite is the proper medicine to sitve ground squirrels, gephers, prairie dogs, etc."

Take an inch and a haif or two toches of dynamite. Pot it in a bit of cloth or several thicknesses of paper to form a small round castridge. The the cloth or paper firmly about one and of a piece of tune twelve or four-test inches long, but do not use a cap. Insert one of these charges well into the mouth of every lote and pack loose dist around the fuse, having enough of the end outside to tight earlie. There will be no explosion.

There being no cap or other detonator, the dynamite will simply burn filling the hole with dense, poisonous fumes that will almost instantly stiffe and then hill every ilving thing inside.

N A BLIZZARD

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

Katrine Wharten was being talked about. Tongues and fingers were fly-ing at the Ladies' Missionary band. The big stove in the parlor at the church was sending out great waves of welcome heat, for outside a blis-sard was raging. Mrs. Milton, on the floor with an immense pair of scis-sors in her hand, was cutting around a shirt pattern laid on red flame!. "What I want to know is," Mrs. Milton paused and waved her scissors with a Patrick Henry gesture,

"why she won't come. It looks mighty queer to me. I sometimes think it must be a guilty conscience."
Rev. Mr. Washburn raised his head from the sermon he was preparing in his study. He frowned and pushed back his chair impatiently. He had an idea that he knew of whom they were talking, and it hurt. Mrs. Milton.

"Of course, when a woman is living all alone she can't be too careful. Naturally when her uncle died and left her the house and a little money to live on, she left her work in the city and came here. All well and good! But how do folks know what kind of a person she is, coming here a perfect stranger, unless she tries to prove she's respectable? She's been asked to join every society in this church and has refused. And I've seen her with my own eyes, through the parior window, playing cards by herself." "Of course, when a woman is liv-cards by herself."

The young minister knew without hearing that the ladies of the church were hostile to the independent young woman. A few waks before when he was in bed with a serious illness Katrine Wharten had pitched in. She went over every day to the preacher's house and washed dishes, cooked, baked, scrubbed porches and fromed. Once she had washed the clothes.

The lowered voice in the ladies.

The lowered voice in the ladies parlor caused him to shudder. He knew perfectly well that all this was being discussed. The propriety of her attention to the sick man had been questioned by all the ladies of the congregation.

He could stand it no longer. He could stand it no longer. He put on his hat and went out. The wind and snow that met him at the door suddenly cooled his indignation, What had he done to be blessed with plenty and comfort when fellow men, just as worthy, were suffering? For instance, Mr. Cassidy with his wife and four children and likely another one, had been sick for four months. He wondered now if they had food and coal. He would go immediately and find out.

The wind fairly blow him into the carpetless hallway of the Cassidys. He had to brace himself against the wall to get the door shut. The sudden lull from the beating elements outside seemed queer—the house usually noisy was hushed. The doorway into the front room was open. Four children were quietly playing a game on the floor, a big fire was burning in the grate, and in a low, broken chair near it sat Katrine Wharten dowing. On her lap lay a newlyborn baby.

Rev. Washburn went in as sorting born baby.

Rev. Washburn went in as softly as he could, but Katrine heard him and sat up with a start, nearly dropping the baby. She laughed as she grabbed it.

Then she turned a lovely red. It was the first time he had even spen

"You seem to be doing more than honors, Miss Katrine. It makes me ashamed of my tardiness. How is Mike's rhoumatism? Is the baby a boy or rheumatism? Is the baby a boy or a girl?" It's a girl." piped Linzia, aged ten. "An' pap's rheumatism's conething awful. It was floroe when Miss Wharton came day fore yesterday. We was all hungry too, an' it was mighty cold. Ma was sick too. Miss Wharten, she—"

A GOLDEN JUBILEE

MISSOURI'S FIFTIETH ANNIVER SARY GATHERING

Of Sunday School Workers to Se Hat in St. Louis Nov. 16, 17 and 18.

Most fitting it is that the "Golden Jubilee" Convention of the Missouri Sunday School Association should be held in St. Louis, the city which gave it birth. This very first convention was called to order by Hon. E. O. Stanard, in the old First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the corner of Eighth and Washington, Oct. 24, 1866. Hon. S. B. Kellogg of St. Louis was the first president.

Twenty-five counties were represented by 68 delegates, St. Louis by 138, six other states by 27 and one from India. William Reynolds and Stephen Parson were two of the leaders. One resolution expressed the "hope that the good work of organization will go on throughout the entire state until every county is thoroughly organized and at work."

The twenty-fifth convention was held in Sedalia in August, 1890. D. R. Wolfe was president. There were 180 delegates from 38 counties and Sh Louis.

W. C. PEARCE.

At the "Golden Jubilee" Convention at least 2,000 delegates are expected from a distance, with as many more from St. Louis. The president now is William H. Danforth, head of the Ralston Purina Mills, St. Louis; vice-president, R. A. Long, the "humber thing," of Kansas City; treasurer, L. F. Smith, head of the American Educational Society, St. Louis.

A new day has dawned in the Sunday School world. While there are many antiquated Sunday schools in Missouri, still operated according to the ideals of 50 years ago, as the workers are brought into contact with modern methods (through the more than 600 conventions and institutes held annually under the auspices of the Missouri Sunday School Association) more and more are the schools becoming real schools offering real courses in religious education.

The last three state conventions have reached a high standard intentions.

The last three state conventions have reached a high standard, indeed, but the "Golden Jubiles" will set a new pace. The program will be intensely practical, much time being siven to separate conferences, under expert instructors. No expense is being spared in providing the leading specialists of America.
